THE PLF EMERGING LEADERS COLLABORATIVE

Achieving Your Leadership Potential - When you, as a Next Generation Leader, better understand your leadership potential and how to grow into that potential, it benefits your career, your organization and our city. You will expand your understanding of how you can heighten the effectiveness and impact of your leadership, no matter what your current role in your organization.

Building and Sustaining Trusting Relationships - What does trust have to do with your effectiveness and impact in your organization? Everything. When you demonstrate trust and trustworthiness, you build partnerships that can lead to great things. By learning how to better build and maintain trust, you become a bridge builder and not a bridge burner, a skill that will benefit you in your workplace – and personal - relationships for the rest of your life.

Influencing Others for the Common Good - Learning how to influence others more effectively can change the course of your career and your life. That is why John Maxwell writes, “The best investment in tomorrow is to develop your influence today.” You will learn how to have a significant and positive influence on others no matter what your position or job title.

Creating a Healthy Culture - No matter how inspiring your organizational vision or how brilliant your strategic plan, you will not be able to attract, develop and retain the people you need without building a healthy culture/work environment. Even if you cannot transform the culture of your entire organization, you can build and maintain a healthy culture for those in your sphere of influence.

Mentoring Others to Achieve Their Potential - Your role as a leader is not just about unearthing and using your talents, skills and abilities. Your role is also to do everything you can to help those you lead to unearth their talents, skills and abilities. In fact, your success as a leader is determined by how effectively the people you lead carry on the mission of your organization when you are not there. That is why the primary role of every leader is to develop other leaders.

Leading Organizational Change - In our rapidly changing world, accepting the status quo is the greatest threat to your organization's long-term success. As one leader put it, “If the rate of change on the outside of your organization exceeds the rate of change on the inside, the end is near.” That is why change leadership skills like crafting a vision, building alignment and championing execution are becoming a vital part of every leader’s skill set.
